

Double success for amiando AG at the TechCrunch Europe Awards

Munich, 07/16/2009. amiando, Europe's leading online tool for event organization, has been selected among the best three web applications and the most outstanding founders' teams in Europe.

Last week the world's biggest network of technology blogs, TechCrunch, held their inaugural European award ceremony for web and technology start ups. The show named "The Europas - European Tech Awards" took place in London and selected the best contestants in 11 award categories out of more than 400 nominated candidates. The jury consisted of TechCrunch readers and 19 industry experts.

amiando (<http://www.amiando.com>), one of the few contestants from Germany, was placed among the winners in two categories: amiando's innovative online tools for event organization received an outstanding award as one of the top three web applications throughout Europe. In the category "Best Startup Founders" amiando reached a finalist position with their founders' team Armin Bauer, Sebastian Bärhold, Marc Bernegger, Markus Eichinger, Felix Haas and Dennis von Ferenczy as one of the five most successful start-ups in Europe. With these two awards amiando yet again proves its position as an important leader of innovation in the European start up and event scene.

"Being nominated for the finals in two categories and a top placement as one of the top three web application throughout Europe is a great honor for amiando. It shows that our start up is one of the most successful and innovative companies on the European market. In our days it is impossible to imagine organizing an event without online event management. The whole amiando team would like to thank all our supporters!" Felix Haas, CEO of amiando AG.
