

Astaro offers free trial of its integrated security appliances

Thirty-day trial allows customers to see value of all-in-one security solutions for themselves without charge

Reading, UK – 24th November 2008 – Astaro (www.astaro.com), a leading vendor of integrated security appliances, today announced that its email and web security appliances would be made available for customers to trial for 30 days without charge. The “Try Before You Buy” offer allows customers to see how the Astaro Mail Gateway and Astaro Web Gateway can offer comprehensive security for their IT environments, and covers both physical hardware appliances as well as virtual appliance versions.

Walter Schumann, General Manager EMEA at Astaro commented, “Integrated security solutions provide considerable value for businesses, enabling them to benefit from a host of security features in one product. Astaro has designed the Try Before You Buy scheme to make it as easy as possible for businesses to see the benefits that integrated security solutions can deliver, as well as to show how quick and easy it is to apply comprehensive email and web security.”

To take advantage of this scheme, organisations can either contact their local Astaro channel partner, or go directly to Astaro via an online portal at www.astaro.co.uk. Once signed-up for the programme, the appliance of choice will be sent across free of charge for trial. At the end of the period, the organisation can either choose to buy the appliance, or return it to Astaro without incurring any shipping costs.

The Astaro Web Gateway offers complete protection for all business data transferred over the web, including malware detection, application control, URL filtering and bandwidth management. The Astaro Mail Gateway is a simple route to complete email security, including protection against spam and other malware transmitted via email, email encryption and remote access support via SSL VPN. Both appliances are available as physical hardware systems, or alternatively as virtual appliances that can be run on VMware virtual infrastructure.
